CH' BOMB, DEBT MAY BLOW US ALL UP...

MOVING? Please use form inside paper and give full information. Mail- ing lists run on Friday for following week.

With all of this screechin' & hollerin' about the Bomb and fears that we may all wind up incinerated as the Soviets & the United States start hurlin' nuclear missiles at one another, we have about concluded the big issue that threatens what we willingly refer to as Our Civilization, may be a bit closer than we suspect and that it will be it just might be a matter of the whole world drownin' in Red ink.

There has been a lot of talk about how our Go-Go Baakora have loaned untold billions to countries all over the world, includin' Communist, undeveloped and the so-called developed and industrial countries and none of 'em appear willing or able in most cases to even pay the interest, much less any of the principal. These debts have to be considered bad for the world drownin' in Red ink.

Fed Cattle Sold Higher Monday as Carcass Beef Continued Firm to Stronger, Hogs Lower at Most Marts

Prices of fed steers and heifers were mostly firm to uneasily higher Monday as supplies were about level with last week and the carcass beef trade opened steady to .1 higher. Reports again indicated that considerable mud was on some cattle and lowered expected yields and this factor along with numbers of yield grade 4's and 5's accounted for the lower end of prices on the choice and prime cattle listed below. Slaughter cows were generally steady at best and lower at several markets. Monday's estimated cattle kill at 125,000 was 1,000 above a week ago and 20,000 larger than last year. The day's market supplies at 20,500 were 400 above a week ago.

Hog prices moved lower at most markets. Market supplies were 5,900 below a week earlier, however, Monday's estimated hog kill at 804,000 was 44,000 ahead of last week and a surprising 81,000 above a year earlier. Average declines across the board ranged from steady at best to .26 cents or .50 cents lower on average, except Sioux Falls was .25 to .75 cents higher.

Price trends, quotes on choice and prime steers and heifers and the mixed good and choice grades and good and choice Holstein steers and the U.S. 1-3 large scaling mostly 200 to 250 pounds included:

President Pledges Strong Effort to Free Farm Exports From Unfair Subsidies of Foreign Countries, Boost Farm Prices

(Editor's Note: The complete text of President Ronald Reagan's in the American Farm Bureau convention in Dallas on Tuesday is reproduced below.)

Bob Delano I thank you very much, for this opportunity and you led me and my family to the farm. I thank you for the down on the farm welcome. I'm like I once heard a fellow say, I'm happy as a hog in a tator patch. And for me, I'm happy to be in the Farm Bureau. I'd like to read part of it for you. Bob gave thanks for all that is good and well on every farm, for families and health, for understanding, for understanding neighbors, for puppies, kittens, calves, for good rains, fertile soil and good crops. For freedom to message, and speak for one self and the great voice of agriculture that is the Farm Bureau. Well I say amen to these things, because they embody the spirit of Farm Bureau and I'm delighted to share in that spirit today. Now if there's one thing you must possess to be a farmer, it's patience. I know how difficult the last several years have been for farmers, as difficult as they fact could change the lyrics to that old song to read "How To Keep Them Down on the Farm After They've Seen the Grain Crisis."

I want to thank you for your patience and support. On several occasions, especially on the legislative front, I've felt like that neighbor who's needed some assistance and the Farm Bureau has been there with a helping hand. Because of that friendship, my deer and Jack Block's door will always be open. You know there is a story about a young fellow from the city who lived out in the work on a farm. One day he heard a noise and the first morning everyone was up and before dawn. The new hired hand and the farmer made their way in the dark out to the field, neither one of them saying a word, and finally the city fellow asked, "what kind of oats were they going to cut, wild oats or tame oats?" The farmer, a little surprised, said, "well, tame oats of course, why do you ask?" "Well," he said, "I was just wondering why we're sneaking up on them in the dark."

Well, that's about as much as some people know about today's farm problems. What I'd like today is to discuss what our administration, or how our administration sees the problems, and what we plan to do about them. I am going to use the word farmer throughout these remarks. I want the women to know I mean them as well, not only the woman who are farm operators, but those who are farm wives. Like marriage, farming is a partnership, and I know most of you ladies, even with children and household chores also help with the livestock and the bookkeeping, and I just wanted to get that little reminder in while your husbands were sitting there to hear it.

All of you will know the reasons for the current farm situation. During the 1970's, the world demand for United States farm products exploded. There was a world food shortage at the same time that economies were expanding, and the value of the dollar was declining, making it easier to buy U.S. goods. Having crops from the ground was the best thing to find all on your land. U.S. agricultural exports rose 500% in ten years, and not farm income more than doubled, and farmers did what other American businessmen would do, they looked up to produce. They bought more equipment, applied more fertilizer, cropped more land and embraced more science and technology. The acres devoted to corn, cotton, soybeans and wheat jumped nearly 40% during the 70's. Things looked mighty good, while not exactly a gold rush, there certainly was a grain rush. Agriculture came pouring into the 1980's with a productive capacity and hopes for the future. But 2,000 years ago the Roman poet Virgil said,

"God didn't will that the way of cultivation should be easy." Old Virgil didn't know how right he was. Three years ago this month the previous administration embargoed grain shipments to the Soviet Union. Our 19% share of the Soviet market plummeted to 30%.

Other countries filled in the gap and then locked in new long-term trade agreements with the Soviets. We not only lost sales, we lost our reputation as a reliable supplier. It takes years, not months to regain that reputation. As you know, we lifted the embargo and we've been working hard to repair the damage to our farm exports. We want the world to know that it can count on America and its farmers for two things: Generous food aid for those who are hungry, and the reliability of our farm supplies.

To rebuild our reputation as a reliable supplier last March 22nd, I pledged as end to export interruptions except in extreme foreign policy circumstances. I've kept that pledge. As the governor of another great agricultural state, Charles Thorne of Nebraska said to me last summer, "there must be no question about our respect for contracts, we must restore confidence in the United States reliability as a supplier." An agreement would also protect Americans from possible Soviet disruptions of our domestic market.

Well, we have now taken another important step toward restoring that confidence, and I wanted you to be the first to know about it. Today I signed into law House Resolution 5437 - The Commodity Futures Trading Commission Reauthorization Legislation, and as you know, it gives contracts sanctity in law. The force of law, our law, our customers now have the delivery assurance that you have asked for, and we stand ready as a nation to see them the grain we have and they need.

As we have in the past, we'll continue to differentiate between readily available agricultural products and industrial goods and technology. Other challenges remain to be met. As if the grain embargo hadn't been enough, the world's economic expansion took its toll on our farm products, and to add to that, a stronger dollar increased the prices our farm products overseas. And the unfair trade practices that some foreign competitors used continued hitting the farmer below the belt. To top it all off, we've had record growing seasons lately. Even the great industries of America are pale in comparison to the efficiency and productivity of American Farmers. What the microchip has done for technology, the American farmer has done for agriculture. About 15 months ago we had 185 million bushels of corn in farmer held reserves, now we have 11 times that much, 2 billion bushels, an incredible increase in just such a short time, two years. We've also had record

The dispersion of this herd represents the merging by Sugar Loaf of the Colossal Cattle Company and the Shalco herds. The dams and sires of many of the Denver Grand Champion Carcasses will sell.

Quality has been a tradition at Sugar Loaf with a strong "Colossal" base, fortified by his great son, "Trailblazer", and then the best females by Southold Bar Lad 500, Diamond Legs Ranger and Ben's Big Boy. All of this great blood has been combined with the featured herd sires now in use at Sugar Loaf.

On the Chicago Board of Trade this week, the markets lacked any new, original news. The story is the same as it has been for a month. The farmer is sitting on his record corn, bean, and wheat crops and he is not selling. I guess he is watching the stock market.

On the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the cattle market continues to be the leader. The February cattle option has rallied over $5 in the past three weeks. I have mentioned for several weeks that the livestock market and feeder calves should work higher into winter. That still appears to be the scenario. Buy the slaughter hogs 100 light sharp breakers. By July, hogs and bellies should be much higher in price than in strong hands. Feeder hogs at $6.00, February hogs at $6.00, this calls for $6.00, and February bellies at $6.00.

For more information, please call Jerry Welch at (814) 498-5600, Jerry F. Welch, Prudential-Sachs Securities, 484 Madison House Center, St. Louis, MO 63102.

Commodities Comment

Week Endlog January 7, 1983

The bull in the stock market continues to march on. The Dow Jones Industrial Average surged to historic highs this week coupled with record volume. There is continued belief that a genuine economic recovery is coming and the public wants to buy, buy, buy. This bullish fever has also been a supporting influence for all markets. Right now it seems a trader can buy corn, silver, winter wheat, 3.32-3.40, 1 light lower, mostly steady. No. 2 yellow corn, 2.80-2.85, steady to 1 higher. No. 1 yellow corn, 2.80-2.85, steady to 1 higher. No. 2 yellow corn, 2.80-2.85, steady to 1 higher.

Decision 83

Purebred Beefmaster Bulls

Harrell Cattle Company presents 100 top commercial bulls and ten top herd sire prospects from the Harrell program. Decision '83 will be held at Harrell's Lake Ranch sale facility and will start at 1:00 p.m. on January 29th.

Decision '83... for the producer who wants to upgrade his production in 1983 - who wants to get more calves that grow faster, weigh heavier and put extra dollars in the bank. The biggest decision a cattleman makes every year is what kind of bull he's going to put on his cows. That, in large measure, governs just what kind of return those cows are going to give him the following year. That determines the quality as well as the quantity of calves he will have to sell 18 months down the road. A cattleman can gamble on bulls that are no more than cow fresheners or he can decide to upgrade his calves - 25-40 of them at a time - by using a bigger, better quality bull. That's where Decision '83 comes in. The bulls will be there... the kind that will upgrade, that will sire moneymaking calves.

Angus bulls help reduce calving problems

...give you more calves to sell

Proved by sound research. Angus bulls produce fewer calving problems than any other beef bulls, according to U.S. Meat Animal Research Center tests, based on 2,368 calves born.

3-year-old cows bred to Angus bulls had only 3% calving problems, compared to 6% bred to Hereford bulls, and 10% to 27% bred to recent imports. In mature cows Angus bulls produced virtually no calving problems.

The Angus advantage is much larger with first-calf heifers. The exotics tested caused problems in 60% to 75% of births.

In an analysis of calving difficulty by Texas A&M University, based on 3,493 calves born in a Charolais herd from 35 sires, the cost of using mechanical pullers averaged $85.50 per calf and $243.24 for caesarean.

Every calf weaned bore a charge of $15.26 because of the level of calving difficulty during the 5-year study.

More calves—more money. Ohio State research showed: "8 more calves reared per 100 cows by crossing with an Angus bull."

At 42 feeder calf sales in Kentucky, selling 46,064 calves, black-whiteface steers brought an average of $4.84 more per cwt. than straight Herefords.

Wisconsin research proved: "Angus reach Choice grade in the shortest feeding time." This saves feed and interest costs.

Advance with Angus. Yes, Angus is one tough breed for today's cowman. Some commercial operators are suffering because they're using the wrong breed of bulls.

Pulling calves, losing calves at birth, rebreeding delays and cutting off horns are costly.

So this year, why don't you use registered Angus bulls? You, too, can "Advance with Angus."

Future of the Small Purebred Breeder

By Jim D. Brown, President
Texas Brahman Assn.

Anytime an individual enters the purebred cattle business, regardless of the breed, the future of the operation depends intently upon that individual, not on the breed of cattle. There is certainly a market for all breeds.

Too many times a particular breed may be going strong at a given time and a new person is encouraged to enter the business since it looks like a gravy train. This may well be true in some cases, but these cases are extremely rare.

As a purebred breeder, any new or small established breeder must have goals for his operation, incorporated in these goals, whatever they may be, are limiting factors which include, acreage available for the operation, facilities for cattle handling, finances, and time available to work and promote the cattle. Whether it is a part-time or full-time venture may play an important role in determining the size of the operation. Perhaps an additional factor that should not be overlooked is whether the venture must make a profit, if it is to be used as a tax shelter only, or if it is merely a hobby regardless of profit.

Two Factors Can Make Or Break A Small Purebred Breeder

After a new breeder establishes his goals and enters into the business, the future of his operation will hinge solely on his ability to successfully accomplish two items. First, the quality factor must be stressed in the breeding and the herd sire. The breeder must be keenly aware of his association's breed excellence requirements and strive to achieve this excellence. Too often a new breeder will purchase high quality females and then, for some reason or the other, will purchase a bull of lesser quality that will not increase quality in his offspring. If this occurs, the future of the operation is immediately in jeopardy.

The only way to achieve quality is to study breed excellence requirements and know what he desires to breed into his herd. Breed Associations will certainly furnish ample material for the new breeder to study. Next, the breeder should begin to compare cattle that are for sale in terms of their excellence and then purchase the best cattle he can find for the money he has available. Visiting breed clinics, field days, and other ranches, as well as inspecting cattle at livestock shows are good ways to study the breed before starting a herd.

After the herd is started, a system of good records is essential to keep producing excellent quality. It is a must to keep weaning weights and production records on cows. Again, each Association will gladly help with forms and so on regarding record keeping systems.

Since I have been discussing the cows, I would like to briefly mention the herd sire. Many times an excellent herd sire is the key to survival in a purebred operation. Probably the best cow in the country would be of little value if a bull does not transmit breed quality to his calves. Therefore, a breeder must decide to purchase a herd sire. Many bulls carry a price tag that prohibits the small breeder from purchasing. With this in mind the breeder must decide what he can afford to spend on a herd sire or if he should breed artificially. Artificial insemination methods allow small breeders to breed superior proven bulls at a minimal cost. The time and facility factors easily enter the picture as to the practicality of A.I. One rule of thumb is purchasing a herd sire is to spend approximately twice the average price of your brood cows. At a later time, you may want to purchase a more superior bull.

Whatever the decision, the selection of the herd sire should be careful and a well deliberated decision. The future of the small breeder may hinge on this single selection.

Second, the other factor that can make or break a small purebred breeder is that ghost in the closet called "Marketing." After the quality is considered, the marketing aspects erupt into the picture. You can breed the best cattle in the world, but if you can't sell them, it doesn't make a bit of difference. You cannot sit back and wait for your phone to ring and the buyers to beat your door down trying to buy your quality cattle. If you do, your future is again in jeopardy. Any company, ranch, or other business that is a success is one that markets its product. How many times have I received letters and calls from small breeders asking, "Where can I sell my bulls and heifers?"

This question leads me to state the future of the breeder lies in the ability of him to market his cattle, more so than any other aspect of his operation. With this in mind, I would like to focus attention to a small breeder's marketing program very briefly. Let me stress, however, that if the small purebred breeder cannot survive, then neither will the large breeder. The small purebred breeder is one of the chief purchasers of cattle from the large established purebred breeder.

To market cattle, the small purebred breeder must first look at collective marketing of his cattle. He should be a member of a local organization for his breed and collectively promote and sell their cattle. Keep in mind that many cattle are sold by working together. If there is not a local breed association in your area, form one. This new association should cover a radius of approximately 150 miles around a center point.

West Kansas Feedlots

Dodge City, Jan. 7 (USDA) - Slaughter steers and heifers closed mostly 1.00 lower. Holsteins continued under poor demand. Warm, sunny weather melted snow and cattle began to "pick-up" mid this week. A few choice cattle will be "carried over," but most feedlots and cattle owners were willing to take the price downturn in an effort to stay current in marketings.

Steers 28,100: Throughout the period, choice 2-4, mostly 8, 1000-1225 lbs. 60.50-61.75; mostly 61.00-61.50; choice with end good 1050-1225 lbs. 60.00-61.50, mostly 60.50-61.00; good and choice 58.50-60.00; 1175-1400 lb Holsteins 61.00-62.50. Heifers 18,000: Throughout the period, choice 2-4, mostly 3, 900-1075 lbs. mostly 60.00-60.50; bulk 59.00-59.50; choice 58.50-59.00; good 57.50-59.00; mixed 56.50-58.00; mixed commercial to choice heifers and heiferettes 57.50-59.00. 54.50-57.50.

Come By And See Why!

A market is there in each area and it is up to the local group to find, develop and cultivate this market.

Your state and National Associations are there for you. Be a partner with them with your membership. These associations are there to help you. Keep in touch with these groups by attending their meetings, functions and sales. Many leads for sales are picked up by the people at these meetings and gatherings. Remember that an informed and knowledgeable breeder can discuss his product much more intelligently. Every meeting I attend I either hear of a potential customer or meet one. In most cases I don't hear of these prospective sales if I miss the breed's functions.

Ninety percent of your sales will come from within a sixty mile radius of your operation in your first years. If they know you exist. To let them know you exist, advertise at least once each month in the classified section of your local newspapers. This is not costly and will get the job done and help to establish your Ranch name. Other sources of advertising are very helpful such as your weekly and bi-weekly livestock publications, your breed journal, and your monthly publications.

Place a reach sign showing directions to your operation on roads and highways near you to direct people to you. These signs must have a picture of a bull or a cow to direct their attention. Many times your neighbors of three or four miles away will see your sign and visit with you to see what you have. This is a prospective sale.

Business cards are very helpful and in many cases will result in a sale three or four years later. They are inexpensive and are of great value.

Each breeder should have a one page brochure with pictures of the operation, cattle and herd sire, as well as directions to the Ranch. When someone writes to you are you write to them, enclose a copy of your brochure. These should be reprinted about every three years and are of nominal cost.

Any person visiting your operation should be loaded with literature about your breed of cattle before he leaves your place. A head shake is nice as well as good conversation, but make sure your visitor leaves with either a purchase order or a lot of material to think about when he gets home.

Take pictures of your best animals for all printed materials so these brochures with these quality pictures can be put on the bulletin boards of the local auction barns in the area.

When you do make a sale, contact your buyers in 30 to 60 days to see how they are doing. Better still, if you have the time drop by his operation and inspect your cattle with him. A satisfied customer will help you sell another customer. Every satisfied customer you have will lead to two more customers. I will guarantee this in any breed.

If a customer comes to your ranch and wants an animal of a particular age or type, contact other members in the area association and find out what they have available. Once the animals are located, take the prospective buyer to their ranch and help him merchandise his cattle. It is customary for a breeder to pay a five percent commission to cover time and mileage for assistance with a sale, but this is entirely optional with the breeders.

Contact your county agents and tell them where you are and what you have. Many prospective customers ask them for particular breeds and if they are being sold in the area. Also, the Vocational Agriculture teachers in the local schools, take them a brochure and tell them where you are. This could lead to club calf sales as well as other sales. While you are there, invite the teachers and their students to visit your purebred cattle operation when they take field trips.

A point that cannot be stressed enough is that your bulls must be sold for what they are worth. This means culling the low quality bulls out. All purebred breeders have a "knife" and all good successful purebred breeders use this "knife" in their operation. The end result is a quality group of bulls for sale that will bring a top price. Don't let a cull group go out to the community with your brand on him. One cull bull sold for a lower price will cost you many sales later. When your brand is seen on a bull, make it stand for something excellent.

I have mentioned just a few ways to help the small purebred breeder market his cattle. There are many other successful marketing approaches most part and no one seems to have the foggiest notion as to how it is gonna work out. The remedy the politicians have come up with is the same old one, just keep throwin' more money at the problem.

We got some friendly kiddin' a couple of weeks ago when we suggested that Uncle Sam was probably the worst off as far as debt was concerned and that more than $1 Trillion over-draft was owed so much about was probably more like $20 Trillion. However, take a look. The civilian and military pension funds are at this writing a trillion short of funded by the U.S. Govt. Add a few items like Govt. guaranteed FHA, FmHA, export guarantees, business loans through various agencies like SBA, etc., not to mention bailouts like Lockheed and Chrysler, and various other public services in this country and around the World and an outfit you probably never heard of called the Federal Financing Bank which was set up in 1974 and which borrows money at below market rates from the Treasury and lends it out at below market rates to business, rural electric co-ops and various nations. This enables the politicians to conceal the true size of the public debt. This and other off budget capers like deficiency appropriations and other tricks of the money trade keep us all in the dark which probably saves our elected servants from untold retribution at the hands of the voters.

Look at the debt easy money has enabled businesses of all kinds, from the largest corporations to individual businesses and individuals their own debts to pile up and it gets really scary. The rash of bankruptcies is causing some folks to complain quite a bit and the sole reason for these debts. Consider the number of individuals who have sought shelter in bankruptcy, all on account of more debt than they can find, and in most cases this was easy money and easy credit from usin' plastic money in the form of credit cards, etc. Yes siree, it looks like we may all drown in a flood of IOUs and printing press money, long before we are faced with an atomic face-off with Russia. What is really frightening is the fact that these billions of debt we are carryin' so much about in Mexico, Brazil, Poland and Argentina to mention a few, are really very small potatoes compared to what our own United States is obligated for.

Ever thine,
The Editor.
P.S. Uncle Sam figures the now war being waged again Drunk Drivers may very well run into the same problem, if it already has not, that past efforts to legislate morals have encountered. It gets pretty tough to make folks do right by using legislative force, and to date it hasn't ever worked as well as planned. —

AMERICAN RED BRANGUS ASSOCIATION NEWS

Doi & Garland Timmons of El Paso purchased six hollers to start their Red Brangus herd at the recent West Texas Heifer Sale in Brownwood.

Fall Harvest Reaps $1578 Average

Fifty-five Red Brangus yearling heifers sold for an average of $1578 to gross $86,775 at the first West Texas Red Brangus Breeders Fall Heifer Sale in Brownwood.

Volume buyers at the sale were Perry Martin of Martin River Ranch in Clifton and Dot and Garland Timmons of El Paso, both now members of the American Red Brangus Association.

Twenty buyers, all from Texas, joined in to purchase the 55 lots offered. The acceptance of the Red Brangus breed by the commercial community throughout the country definitely helped raise the sale average here today. Ronnie Farrington, sales manager of the event stated, "When these heifers start producing, the demand for Perry Martin of Martin River Ranch in Clifton was volume buyer at the West Texas Heifer sale in Brownwood.

Extra Sets Red Brangus World Record

The sale of a one-tenth semen interest in Red Brangus herd sire Extra 6477, for the record netting price of $40,000 to Franklin Pinto of Port Aransas, Texas, has been announced by co-owners Guern Bros. Ranch of Linn, Texas and Oakway Farms of Compton, Texas.

This sale places a Red Brangus World Record Value of $400,000 on this five-year-old sire, bred and raised by Oakway Farms.

Flato's purchase of the EXTRA interest, came in extensive search over the past several years for the highest performing genetics in the Red Brangus breed. In addition to building his own impressive donor cow herd, Flato has also joined Guerns and Oakway in an ambitious embryo transfer joint venture — using a select group of "Pick of the Herd" females. "I believe a program for Accelerated Breed Improvement through Embryo Transfer will go forward more rapidly and with less risk by a group of breeders in a cooperative program," said Flato. "If each cow is bred to three bulls, we can evaluate over 100 genetic combinations in four years."

"By pooling and sharing our genetics," said Sosnowy, "we expect the Red Brangus brood to be the big winner."

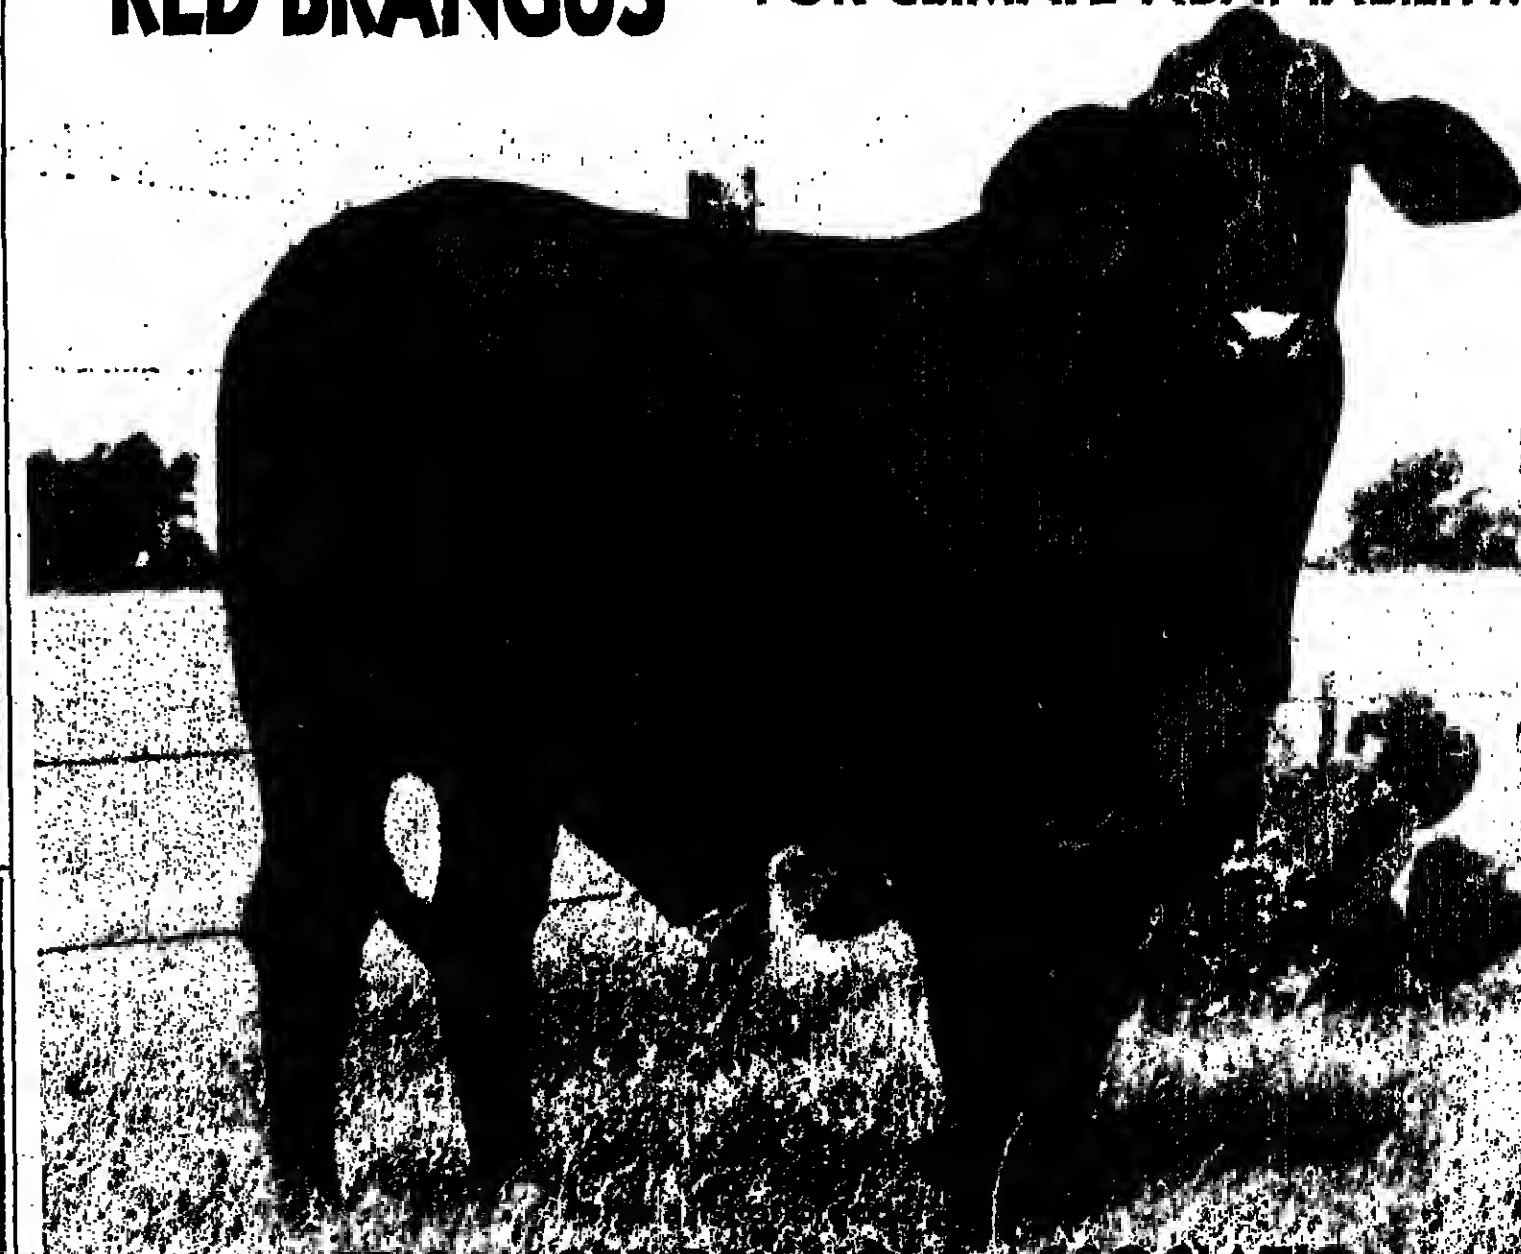

As a pioneer and leader in the performance testing of Red Brangus cattle, Oakway Farms has developed one of the top performance herds in the country; in fact, the average 206 day weight of their bull calf crop last year was the highest known average in Red Brangus history. The Guern Bros. ranching operation dates back to the 1880's, and their first two Red Brangus production sales have set seven Red Brangus world records.

TAHC Tells of New Bangs Regs

Austin — Revised and updated federal brucellosis regulations became effective Jan. 12, 1983. Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director, Texas Animal Health Commission, announced today.

"The present Texas brucellosis program will remain in effect until Commissioners of the Texas Animal Health Commission act upon proposals before them. However, Texas livestock producers need to be aware now of the new federal changes," Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director, Texas Animal Health Commission, said.

Under the federal regulations, Texas will continue its two-area classification, and as of Jan. 12, 1983, the present Class A area will be Class B area, with the western half of the state. The Class C area (formerly Class A area) contains 114 counties in the eastern half of the state.

The most significant change for movement of cattle for Texas livestock producers will be those non-vaccinated test eligible females of breeding age in the Class C area which are to be shipped out of that area.

Under the new federal regulations, a non-vaccinated test eligible female will require two negative tests at least 60 days apart, with the second test within 30 days prior to movement and rest at destination.

The Federal Land Bank of Texas makes long-term real estate loans on farm and ranch land throughout the state.

Weston Promoted By Federal Land Bank

Austin — John Weston has been promoted to assistant vice president of the Federal Land Bank of Texas. The appointment was effective January 1, 1983, according to Thomas H. Benson, president.

In June 1977 he was employed as assistant manager at the Federal Land Bank of Texas. The appointment was effective January 1, 1983, according to Thomas H. Benson, president, named assistant vice president in the credit operations department in July 1980.

With the Land Bank's relocation to Austin from Houston, Weston assumed new responsibilities as assistant vice president-association operations.

Federal Land Bank Closed 3,517 Loans

Austin — The Federal Land Bank of Texas closed a total of 6,547 loans for $382,127,000 in 1982, according to Thomas H. Benson, president.

The Bank's loan volume was down from 1981. Benson said, due to a noticeable decline in sales of farm and ranch property during the last half of 1982. Property sales represent 35 to 40 percent of the Bank's normal business.

A reduction in farm building and other improvements due to continued adverse economic conditions, and reduced income to farmers also contributed to the decline in loan volume.

Total loan volume outstanding at the end of 1982 was $2.4 billion. The Federal Land Bank of Texas makes long-term real estate loans on farm and ranch land and rural residences throughout the state.

AVOID CHANGING WELL LEATHERS FOR MANY YEARS
 Perma-cups are molded urethane, more wear resistant than nylon. Perma-cups will outlast leathers 10 to 1. Their tapered design allows only 1/8" wearing, instead of 5/8" of a leather. Much less friction for easier pumping and cylinder life greatly. Perma-cups must be used in a good or new cylinder, as they do not swell. Install Urethane Perma-cups, Urethane Check-balls, and Urethane Pump Rod-checks and don't pull that well for many years. Thousands are in wells that have not been relined in 9 years! All are available in standard cylinder and pipe sizes. Write or call for our catalog. We ship same day order is received. This is our 33rd year serving ranchers.

Commodities Comment

The "bull" has returned to the futures markets, and he's having a field day. Nearly all markets are experiencing higher prices due to a drop in interest rates, fears of inflation, a global debt crisis, and hopes of a United States economic recovery. There is a real "bull" fever supporting most markets. The psychology has changed. It is decidedly bullish and those still short metals, grains, livestock, stock futures indexes etc. have paid dearly for their out-of-step thinking.

On the Chicago Board of Trade the grain market is strong. The farmer is just now beginning to market some of his recently harvested grain and, consequently, the cash markets have collapsed. But the futures have worked higher. Now high prices for the month were seen in beans, now crop corn and soybean prices are high. My bias is to sell the futures in grains. Under current market psychology that is like trying to stop a freight train. If anyone has a good idea as to long-term direction of grains, please let me. At this writing March corn closed at $2.58, March wheat $3.46, and March soybeans $5.08.

On the Chicago Mercantile Exchange the cattle market continues to lead the way higher. In the past several days hogs and cattle hit a 15 week high before coming under moderate profit-taking. Again, I suggest traders buy sharp price set-backs. The livestock complex should remain firm into the 1st quarter of 1983. The April cattle option looks a little overextended at this time, and a move back to $59.00 would not be unexpected. At this writing April cattle closed at $61.95, April hogs $58.95, and February bellies at $57.82.

The metal markets are for real. The world has been waiting for 2-3 years for bull markets in exotic metals and that move appears well under way. I believe that 1983 will witness tremendous bull markets in the so-called strategic metals. These markets will respond with sharply higher prices to an improving world economy or any disruption of supply from their producers.

I have mentioned before that the palladium market led the way higher for precious metals followed by platinum, then silver and finally, gold. The price of palladium has doubled in less than 90 days. The metal markets have also witnessed major price hallogenisms in the platinum/gold spread. I anticipate a new price relationship between silver and gold. I believe that spread should narrow to about 30 to 1 premium gold.

The next several months will offer the speculator some fantastic opportunities in the metal markets. But due to their extreme volatility and the fact that they have already had a sharp up-move, I urge caution. Remember that gold this year should be a follower and not a leader.

My guess is that when a sharp break in the metals markets begins, it will be led by gold. The "bulls" believe gold will hit $700, silver $20, and platinum $750 before year end. Sounds like a lot of fun doesn't it? At this writing February gold closed at $490, February silver $12.84, April platinum $480, and June palladium $127.95.

If you would like further information on hedging or speculating in the Futures Market, please contact Jerry F. Welch at (314) 436-3800. Jerry F. Welch, Prudential-Bache Securities, 434 Madison House Center, St. Louis, MO 63102.

Brangus Bulls—The Budget Balancers

In the 1980's the right bull can make the difference between a losing year and a healthy profit. Brangus bulls can add as much as 100 lbs. per calf at weaning, and that means more dollars at sale time. In addition, Brangus sired calves suit today's trend toward leaner beef and changing grade standards. Their ability to reach an acceptable grade in less time and yield a high percent of lean to fat gives them strong demand with feeders.

For the 80's, put Brangus bulls in your budget, and tip the balance in favor of profit.

Our Girl Friday . . .

By ANN SYLER

Leo Bentley Syler II, our fourth grandchild, was born December 22nd in Santa Cruz, Bolivia. His father, our oldest son, flew in on Christmas Eve and walked in as a total surprise on us, which made all four of ours at home for Christmas. So that was quite an ending to 1982.

1983 has gotten off to just as rousing a start as 1982 ended, with two bull sales that have both been better than anyone expected them to be. The prices are down from last year, of course, but no one could ask for more enthusiasm than we have had from buyers. Nor for more numbers of buyers for that matter.

The Kansas Brangus Association held their second annual sale on January 6th in Selma, KS, selling 65 bulls to 34 buyers, and when looking at the map of Kansas following the sale, we found that they came from the far western edge of the state, to the north right on the Nebraska border, to the south on the Oklahoma border and quite a number of them from the far eastern and central areas.

A representative from one of the publications in Kansas said he had never seen a bull sale in that state draw from every area of the state as did this one. Then this past weekend was the Rojek end guests bull sale at Sulphur Springs. We had 38 buyers from the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee and Louisiana, with a sale average of $1420 on 60 bulls.

So, it appears that the old adage "When the going gets tough, the tough get going" applies to the Brangus bull market more than it applies to anything else. Ranchers will make more of a profit with Brangus bulls than any other breed in those tough times we are in at the present.

We will be on our way to Brink's sale in a day or so in our Texas Hill Country. We Texans are quite justifiably proud of this section of our state which is not only unique and beautiful, but also from which area legends abound.

One new one was related to me recently and I pass it on here to those of you who, like me, had somehow missed this one: It seems that the chief of one of the tribes was nearing the end of his days, and members of the council were wanting him to name the new chief. His problem was he had two sons, Running Deer and Falling Rock, and as a father he could not bring himself to make such a selection, both of them being fine sons. The council advised him to send both of the young braves out in search of food allowing them three days with only bow and arrow and spears to hunt, and the one who returned with the largest food supply would be named chief, as he would be the best provider for the tribe. This was agreed to by all concerned. At the end of the three days, Running Deer brought into camp not only venison, turkey and fowl of all kinds, but also fish, geese, rabbits and beans, enough food for his people for several months. Falling Rock did not return on this day, nor did he for several days following. At the end of those several days, the saddened chief named Running Deer as the new chief to succeed him, and also called all men from the tribe together to instruct them about the search that was to be made for his missing son. As a dreadful thing of some kind must have befallen him, just he would have returned on the specified day. The old chief went so far as to offer a reward, his grief was so great. The reward was all of the treasures of the tribe, including those several stacks of rocks that they had, of which they had heard a tale that a strange white man prized so highly, called gold. And so, the search began, and this is where the legend ends. To this day, no trace has been found. The reward is still there for the taking, notice on your drives through the Hill Country how many signs you see with the message "Watch for Falling Rock." I believe that's quite enough for this month, don't you?

Sightseer admissions to the Eiffel Tower repaid the construction costs within the first year.

Unsubstantiated Dietary Recommendations Could Damage Meat Industry, Expert Says

Scientists who make dietary recommendations based on very low or no hard facts are becoming more vocal, and that trend could spell trouble for the livestock and meat industry, according to Dr. Burdette C. Breidenstein, director of research/nutrition information for the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Speaking at the International Stockman's School in San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 4-6, Breidenstein said some scientists "seem to be willing to make sweeping dietary recommendations on the premise that such changes involve an acceptable risk level for adverse effects and may possibly result in benefits. It is disturbing that such a segment of the scientific community seems to be gaining in influence, especially in the popular press," he said.

While many of these dietary recommendations have been anti-meat, Breidenstein said, "there has been and continues to be - on an increasing body of scientific knowledge reflecting the positive contributions of meat to the diet of man."

"Red meat continues to be a vital contributor to the satisfaction of the human requirement in the U.S.," he said. "The recommendation to consume a balanced and varied diet, including foods from all food groups, remains the most effective approach to good nutrition."

Breidenstein cautioned, however, that our nutrient needs are not a singular quantifiable entity. They depend on many factors, including age, sex, level of physical activity, genetics and general state of health.

Trying to relate our health solely to diet is similar to studying a single tree without recognizing the existence of the forest around it, according to Breidenstein. "The over-simplification of the role of diet or even a single food entity on the health and well-being of the human leads to potentially dangerous conclusions," he said.

In another speech to the same group, Breidenstein stated the meat processing, distribution and marketing industries have a real challenge in keeping up with the enviable productivity of American agriculture. "The extent to which we are successful in meeting that challenge, thereby reducing marketing costs and/or improving upon the perceived value of our products, plays a very important role in the economic health of this great industry," he said.

Breidenstein noted advances in boxed meat packaging, electrical stimulation, roasting techniques, new distribution systems, frozen products and various packaging techniques as ways the meat processing industry is racing with new technologies that could have a positive affect on the overall meat industry.

Fairview Farms Ends Year With Major Sale

On December 17, 1982, Fairview Farms of Lafayette, Louisiana, negotiated the largest private treaty sale of fullblood Simmentals in its history. The 22 head of cattle were shipped in two lots, one shipment going West to Reyes Simmental Ranch in San Antonio and the other going East to D and R Simmental in Cynthiana, Kentucky. Harold Duckworth of Cynthiana was the agent for the dual transaction.

Fairview Farms owner, Bob Lowe, says he was particularly pleased with this sale as it shows a basic strength in the fullblood Simmental market. In spite of a general wank cattle industry in America today, Lowe pointed out that one buyer, Reyes Simmental Ranch, was the first Simmental breeder in the State of Texas, and that Harold Duckworth has the oldest Simmental operation East of the Mississippi River.

When you sell your Simmentals to the oldest breeders on both sides of the Mississippi River, you get the feeling that you're raising the right kind of cattle," Lowe says. Fairview Farm Simmental sales for 1982 were more than double those of any previous year.

The sale has an interesting story behind it. In early December, Toss Williams, Fairview Farms' Fitter/Nutritionist, who was the 1982 Ohio Junior Simmental Association Secretary/Treasurer and was concurrently the Ohio Simmental Association Queen, returned to her home in New Carleton for a week to fulfill her duties at the Ohio State Sale and annual meeting. Duckworth was also at the Ohio sale, as a buyer, and Toss told him about some of the cattle he was presently filling at Fairview Farms.

The following week, Duckworth came to Lafayette, spent three days going through the fullblood herd and made his selections.

Fairview Farms herd manager, Dallas Trahan, who negotiated the sale with Duckworth, has assured Tina that she can return to the Ohio State Sale again next year to talk about South Louisiana Simmentals.

A "little ear" on feeder calves has become an important marketing factor in recent years.

Some feeders are demanding that their order buyers select calves with some Brahman in their genetic make-up. We think one of the best tools available to put a "little ear" on your feeder calves is to turn out a Beefmaster bull.

Contact the N.B.A. for a list of breeders who have breeding age Beefmaster bulls for sale.

Burch Angus Ranch will offer one of its Best and Largest Sales ever on both Bulls and Females Monday, October 31, 1983

THESE CATTLE WILL BE GOOD ENOUGH FOR ANY REGISTERED, COMMERCIAL OR CROSSBREEDING PROGRAM
Where management, performance records, pedigrees and cattle compare. We have big Angus, but we do not judge them just for size. They must have breed character, production, performance and efficiency on pasture or feed.

If our bulls are good enough to SELL, they are good enough to USE in our herd. For that reason we add two to three young bulls each year.

In order to measure improvement in breed characteristics, performance, efficiency, gains, size, and carcass evaluation, all bull calves should be handled the same year after year. This is why we test all of our bulls on the ranch in traps without sheds, 30 to 60 at a time. We use the same ration, more roughage, less grain, and more room. This gives you a bull with improved fertility.

They are training United States auto workers in Japan, who will man plants set up in this country. Not only th' United States, but European countries as well are ramping down on their exports. Not only are th' business firms shook up, but their labor, which was considered to have lifetime jobs, are bein' laid off and th' unhappiness that is rampant over there matches th' kind American and European workers are expressing.

It just goes to underscore that old sayin' that it is indeed a long worm that has no turning. While Americans soo feel for 'em, it don't seem likely anyone over here will feel too badly about seein' 'em stew in their own juice. It is at least a welcome change and whether any good will come of it, it'll mean some difficult strokes by diffrent folks, at least.

condemned. This ability has caused heavy infestations of pricklypear on rangelands root-plowed for brush control, says the range specialist.

When a pad is broken and scattered over the soil surface, it is capable of producing another plant. Haneoka explains. Each plant can grow 5 feet tall and 10 feet in diameter within four years. This means a light infestation can grow and develop to epidemic proportions and eventually render an area useless for grazing.

Pricklypear does beat when rangelands are in poor shape and suffering from drought but decline when rangelands improve. However, recent research shows that it responds to fertilization with higher production and nutritional qualities.

As far as being a supplemental or emergency livestock feed, pricklypear is high in energy but low in protein content, Haneoka notes.

Some ranchers allege the needles of pricklypear with fire to allow livestock to feed on it, especially during drought conditions. However, livestock may continue feeding on them after burning has stopped, resulting in costly internal

National Meeting Kicks Off PCA's 50th Anniversary Year

Kansas City, MO — The nation's Production Credit Associations will be celebrating their 50th anniversary with a national meeting and presentation of a research project examining the future of American agriculture, announced Rick McCarty, director, communications service.

The 423 member PCAs will be holding The National Meeting, March 11, 1983 in Kansas City to commemorate the legislative act that established the Production Credit Association in 1933, and the subsequent 50 years of service to agriculture, McCarty said.

The one-day meeting will underscore the significance of agriculture in America's past, present and future, and will feature several nationally prominent speakers.

As a part of The National Meeting, the results of a special study examining the future of American agriculture will be released. This study, and its findings, is being sponsored by the PCAs and is their gift to U.S. agriculture as a part of the 50th Anniversary celebration.

"The study, being done by Battelle Memorial Institute, is designed to be one of the most significant looks at American agriculture yet done," McCarty said. "It includes an examination of the history of U.S. agriculture, its structure and growth, and the issues affecting its future."

"The National Meeting will have the kick-off for a year-long series of events and activities that PCAs will be conducting in their own communities," McCarty explained.

PCAs are a member-owned agricultural credit cooperative making short- and intermediate-term loans to farmers, ranchers and commercial fishermen. The PCAs are part of the Farm Credit System which also includes the Federal Land Bank and Bank for Cooperatives. This member-owned co-op raises its own funds through the sale of securities on Wall Street.

The goal of PCAs is to improve the income and well-being of America's farmers, ranchers and commercial fishermen through the extension of sound and constructive credit. The 423 Production Credit Associations throughout the United States serve and borrow through some 1,500 full-time offices.

Synovex Implanted Cattle Feeding Trial Results Released

average daily gain and feed efficiency than using either product alone, reported Dr. Lyle Lomes, animal scientist, Kansas State Southeast Experiment Station.

Animals implanted with Synovex and fed a ration containing lasalocid 150g/toni showed an 8.8 percent improvement in daily gain and 5.7 percent improvement in feed efficiency over animals only fed lasalocid, said Lomes.

The combination of Synovex and lasalocid resulted in the best performance, he added, improving daily gain 9.9 percent and feed efficiency 20.8 percent over control.

The trial, conducted in Mound Valley, Kansas, included 82 8-month-old crossbred steers averaging 700 pounds were divided in two groups: Synovex and Synovex and lasalocid.

The cattle started the 142-day trial averaging 642.5 pounds. They were bought from local producers and arrived at the experiment station in June. All cattle were tagged for positive identification. They were also given an A&D vitamin, wormed and vaccinated with 7-way blacktag, IBR-BVD-PI, pasteurella and haemophilus somnus.

The cattle were turned out on brama pasture until mid-October when they were put on a 15 percent protein corn silage ration until the trial began on October 28th.

The trial ration consisted of 25 percent grain concentrate, 70 percent corn silage and 5 percent drug supplement. Silage was decreased daily by 5 percent until reaching a ration of 75 percent grain concentrate, 20 percent corn silage and 5 percent drug supplement.

In this study, the cattle implanted with Synovex and fed lasalocid would have finished 14 days earlier on 784 less pounds of feed than the control cattle, said Lomes.

In a similar trial by Hoffman-La Roche, manufacturer of Bovatec, 86 crossbred steers averaging 700 pounds were divided in two groups: Synovex and Synovex and Bovatec.

The objective of the trial was to determine if Synovex would fit well in a program with Bovatec.

In this 125-day trial, average daily gain in the animals implanted and fed lasalocid was 11.8 percent higher than the animals only implanted. Feed conversion was also 9.2 percent greater than those animals that were both implanted and fed lasalocid.

For more information including a copy of the Synovex and lasalocid study contact Syntex Agriculture at P.O. Box 953, Deerfield, IL 60015.

Don't graze alone grain winter pastures too soon, says Dr. Sim Roewe, Jr., Extension agronomist. Give the plants a chance to establish a good root system by weeding until the plants are six to eight inches high before grazing. Grazing too early will reduce the total forage produced during the growing season.

Pricklypear — Friend or Foe

as well as external injuries. Such animals often remain in poor condition throughout the year, Hanselka points out.

The fact that sheep raise pricklypear fruit can become a problem since seed often become compacted in their stomachs, causing partial or complete blockage and often death.

Pricklypear is a favorite of some wildlife. White-tailed deer and javalina feed on pricklypear while bobwhite quail use the plant for nesting and cover.

A recent survey of ranchers reflects differing opinions about pricklypear. Nearly 50 percent of the ranchers in the Edwards Plateau have serious livestock health problems because of the plant, Hanselka points out, while in South Texas 60 percent of the ranchers consider it to have positive values.

In the final analysis, pricklypear advantages include cost reductions of supplemental feed during drought and winter, lessening of soil erosion and protection of grasses on overstocked ranges, and food and cover for wildlife.

Disadvantages are its low feed value, high costs for singeing needles to allow animals to feed on the plant, possible health hazards to animals and reduced total forage production due to its presence on ranges.

Ranchers need to deal with pricklypear according to their grazing management and personal objectives, advises Hanselka. It can be a friend of life depending on how they view the spiny plant.

There is nothing wrong with having nothing to say — unless you insist on saying it.

Fat Stock Show in earlier days at North Side Coliseum

Nothing's Like It Used To Be, But Sometimes That's Better.

The Fat Stock Show started out as a simple affair under the spreading branches of live oak and pecan trees. Cattle were the only stock present at the first show in 1896, but as the Stock Show grew, it offered the public a larger and better exhibit.

People now find that their bank also offers them more than ever before. When you come to Fort Worth for the Stock Show, stop in at one of the Fort Worth area banks and ask about the special services. You'll be surprised at how much we have to offer.

"NEW STUFF" (continued)New Hog Rations Reduce Scours, Setback

St. Louis — Producers striving to get baby pigs off to a faster start now have an opportunity to significantly reduce post weaning setback and scours, thanks to a reformulated line of baby pig and starter ration recently introduced by Ralston Purina Company.

The new formula and feeding weight recommendations are based on three years of development at our swine research facilities in Missouri, explained Dr. Bud Harmon, director of swine research for Purina. "These new baby pig and starter rations significantly reduce post weaning scours and setback, which occur at a critical time in the pig's development. Our research has shown that getting pigs off to a fast, healthy start between the ages of three and five weeks is crucial to their long-term ability to gain rapidly and efficiently," he added.

According to Harmon, feeding trials with the newly-formulated feeds produced average daily gains in newly weaned pigs that were, "at the very least, 30 percent better than the prior formula. We are avoiding the post-weaning lag."

Purina's feeding recommendations for Pig Starter and Hog Grower Chows have also been revised to allow producers to put pigs on a grower ration at 40 rather than 50 pounds. "This change enables hog producers who pay careful attention to the health and nutrition needs of their 40 lb. pigs to use a less expensive grower ration for the next two pounds of gain," Dr. Harmon said.

Similar adjustments have been made to grind and mix rations, with special improvements to lactating sows. The palatability of starter feeds, "By changing the use of certain ingredients, such as whey, we have been able to markedly improve the palatability of our grind and mix starter feeds. The grind and mix rations also include the formal changes that improve stool consistency and reduce scours," explained the Purina researcher.

Feeding weight recommendations have also been changed for the entire line of High Octane rations, according to Harmon, "to reflect the industry's shift to raising meatier hogs."

"The new formula and feeding weights for Hog Grower and Hog Finisher Chows increase amino acid content to provide the animals with the raw material they need to make the best use of their genetic and labor potential to use food efficiently," explained Dr. Harmon.

For more booklets on the new feeds, producers can write Hog Chows Marketing, Ralston Purina, Checkerboard Square, St. Louis, MO 63184.

Survey Reports Information Needs of Farmers and Ranchers Changing

Chicago — A financial management evolution in occurring on farms across the United States and Canada, according to results of a joint study by Arthur Andersen & Co. and the University of Illinois.

Innovative farmers and ranchers are rapidly adopting sophisticated financial tools to cope with an increasingly complex economic environment. In this, the first major study of financial management practices on the farm, results show innovative farmers are adopting these practices because they believe effective financial management will be critical to survival.

"In the farm environment this means that physical production management is no longer the key indicator of success," said Norman Carlson, an Arthur Andersen & Co. partner and member of the firm's Agribusiness Industry Team. "Return on investment and ability to generate cash flow are equal in importance to business success or failure."

The survey was conducted by Arthur Andersen & Co., an international public accounting and consulting organization, and the Department of Agricultural Economics, College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Opinions on farm information management came from 585 innovative producers, agricultural lenders and consultants in the United States and Canada.

Innovative producers are those farmers and ranchers who have more rapidly adopted new technologies and information management techniques than producers in general. Their responses refer to innovative producers such as themselves. In contrast, the leader and consultant respondents were asked to consider practices of all commercial producers.

Study results indicate that innovative producers have clearly made greater strides in managing their finances than farmers in general. But, even greater progress is expected from all commercial farmers and ranchers. Their collective debt has grown from $12 billion in 1950 to $157 billion in 1980, while farmers face the lowest farm production prices. In terms of purchasing power since 1933.

"Innovators lead the way," said Carlson. The proven pattern of acceptance suggests that other farmers and ranchers will adopt these innovations over the next decade.

"The study shows that innovative agricultural producers are adopting sophisticated accounting systems, small business computers, periodic financial statements and outside management consulting services to manage their farm finances. For example, the smaller computer could become an important tool for farmers and ranchers as it is to the non-farm small businessman," Carlson explained.

Agricultural Finance at the University of Illinois, explained that more sophisticated business practices used more extensively throughout the business community have had their impact on producers. "Seventy-five percent of producer respondents reported proper business sheets, income statements and projected cash flow statements to document their financial position and economic performance," he said. "As farms grow larger, each producer reports to more lenders and leaders who increasingly require complete financial statements."

The rapid acceptance of computers among the agricultural community offers evidence of an increasing interest in effectively controlling financial information. "Respondents estimated that only 3% of all producers currently own computers," said Dr. Steven T. Soaka, professor of Agricultural Economics at the University of Illinois. "However, they expect that one of every six farmers will acquire a computer within the next five years. With approximately 370,000 commercial farmers and ranchers in the United States and Canada, future about 60,000 computers will be used on farms."

Rotary Sifter Separates Fines From Feed

A new rotary sifter is said to separate 99.5% fines from pelleted feed or other products when operated at rates up to 100 tons per hour in being manufactured by California Pellet Mill Co. under license from A. Wijnveen B.V., The Netherlands.

According to CPM, the CryoC Rotary Sifter utilizes centrifugal force to gently roll pellets or other coarse material off the edge of a rotating, non-clogging screen and into a bag or container. Industrial applications suggested include chemicals, foods, dairy products, pharmaceuticals, animal feeds, and plastics. Typical applications noted by the manufacturer include dressing out fines from pellets being discharged from bulk bins during vehicle loading, screening before bagging or after discharge from a loader, separation of fine particles before the grinder, or removal of coarse impurities during intake. The CryoC is also used as a means of increasing grinder capacity and energy efficiency or as a scalper to remove foreign materials before further processing.

Both single- and dual-screen models are offered. The dual-screen model permits the operator to screen siltarate product sizes. When processing small particles, the upper screen containing the smaller perforations is lowered by an actuator onto the lower screen which has the larger of the two perforations. Raising the upper screen exposes the lower screen for processing larger particles only. A wide choice of screen sizes is available.

Operation is said to be extremely quiet. Moreover, adds CPM, installation is flexible because the rotary after is vibrationless and can be either suspended overhead or supported on its own four legs. The incoming spout is secured to a solid dust-tight connection. The low horsepower gearhead motor bolted to the base is extremely energy efficient, states CPM. For more information contact Richard C. Miller, Product Mgr., California Pellet Mill Co., 1800 Folsom St., San Francisco, CA 94108.

New Guidelines on Toxaphene Use, Disposal Are Developed

Guidelines on the use and disposal of toxaphene by the cattle industry have been developed by a special NCA task force. The guidelines were developed in cooperation with officials of the divisions of the Environmental Protection Agency which are involved in solid waste disposal, pesticide use and enforcement.

EPA previously indicated that it would ban most uses of toxaphene, but it said that use of toxaphene as a cattle dip for scabies would continue to be permitted. NCA then took action to develop information to help the industry understand the new regulations regarding use and disposal of toxaphene.

Technical advisors from the NCA Environmental Management and Animal Health Committees — Dr. John Sweetser of Texas A&M University and Dr. Jim Glosser, Montana state veterinarian — met in Washington to write the guidelines. Working with them were EPA officials, Animal Health Committee Chairman Bill Gallagher and NCA staffers Ron Micholli and Tom Cook. The association will continue to keep in touch with EPA in order to see that the new, more stringent regulations are workable.

Following are the recent report and guidelines prepared by the task force.

As announced at a press conference on Oct. 18, 1982, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has issued a notice of intent to cancel or restrict the regulation of pesticides containing toxaphene for most uses. The notice of intent, published in the Federal Register on Nov. 26, 1982, ended a 5 1/2-year technical review process, with the conclusion that potential risks to wildlife and human health resulting from toxaphene exposure were higher than the economic and agricultural benefits.

The cattle and sheep industries, however, will still be able to use toxaphene for scabies treatment in dipping and spray-dip machines. The EPA regulation for such use has been continued i.e. not cancelled, subject to more stringent requirements for application and disposal.

New Restrictions
The new restrictions will be specified on the amended toxaphene label and will include:

1. User registration as a certified pesticide applicator who may handle restricted use pesticides.
2. Protective clothing for applicators and assistants.
3. Concentration of vat solution established at 0.8% toxaphene for scabies control, with correct mixing to maintain this concentration.

4. Prohibition against disposal or dispersal into surface or ground water.
5. Disposal of dip solution in accordance with the label and with provisions of the EPA hazardous waste regulation promulgated under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA).

In addition to use with beef cattle and sheep, toxaphene may still be registered and available for certain "minor uses," which include control of sprouting infestations of armyworms, cutworms, or grasshoppers in small grains, corn, and cotton. Toxaphene formulations will have to amend their labels to include more stringent use restrictions.

Existing stocks of toxaphene products, including those already in wholesale or retail trade channels, may be used for scabies treatment in beef cattle without a label change through Dec. 31, 1983, so long as the products are used in accordance with their present labels. After that, supplemental labeling will be required for use of existing stocks of toxaphene products, until Dec. 31, 1983, then a new EPA-approved label will be necessary for sale or use. After Dec. 31, 1983, existing stocks may not be sold or used; they will have to be disposed of as a hazardous waste under RCRA.

For a cattleman to comply with RCRA in use and disposal of toxaphene, one of three conditions must be met:

A. He qualifies as a "farmer disposing of waste pesticide from his own use," triple rinse empty containers, and disposal of pesticide residues on his own land in a manner consistent with the label.

B. He practices legitimate beneficial reuse or recycling of waste pesticide solution; or
C. He complies with RCRA registration and permit requirements for hazardous waste generators, transporters, or operators of a storage, treatment, or disposal facilities.

As a result of NCA leadership, the two EPA divisions that regulate toxaphene (Office of Pesticide Programs and Office of Solid Waste) are now working on recommended label changes to provide for environmentally safe but practical control in beef cattle and sheep. The label changes being contemplated would stipulate acceptable methods of land application of waste toxaphene solution and thus would assure continued toxaphene availability to the beef cattle industry subject to market conditions.

Key EPA representatives working with NCA on these proposals are hopeful that cattlemen compliance with a properly written toxaphene label will eliminate the present necessity of compliance with RCRA hazardous waste regulations as a separate requirement.

Cool Season Clovers Help Perennial Pastures

By Robert L. Haas
TABS Science Writer

Clovers, long valued for their help in soil building, are looking better than ever as a method of holding down pasture costs, according to scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Three benefits of cool-season annual clovers, mixed with warm-season perennial grasses, are to extend the grazing season with high-quality forage, reduce the need for nitrogen fertilizer, and aid in weed control.

Although some weeds, especially of young stage, may be consumed by livestock, the absence of weeds in an improved pasture is desirable, according to Dr. Gerald W. Evans, forage physiologist with the Experiment Station at Angleton.

"Spring weeds in perennial grass pastures compete for limited nutrients of the availability forage, and are a major obstruction to successful establishment of perennial forages," Evans says.

As to arguments that weeds are of high nutritive value, Evans points out that studies have shown that there are no distinct differences in in vitro dry matter digestibility (IVDMD), or crude protein values when comparing palatable and unpalatable species.

In fact, highly unpalatable weeds such as giant ragweed and common cocklebur frequently have higher IVDMD and protein value than the palatable weeds.

The most common methods of weed control in permanent pastures are mowing and herbicides. Although generally economical, they increase the costs of forage production.

Even compared spring-weed production for two years on grass sods overseeded with clover, receiving various rates of nitrogen fertilizer or receiving nitrogen fertilizer and simazine.

The study was conducted on established Coastal bermudagrass and "Pensacola" bahiagrass sods growing on a Crowley fine sandy loam. Each fall, 180 lb. and 30 lb./acre, respectively of phosphorus and potassium were applied.

"Yuchi" arrowleaf clover was broadcast each October at 4 lbs. pure live seed per acre in 1978 and 1979.

"Mt. Barker" subterranean clover was seeded at 12 lb. pure live seed per acre, in October 1978 and volunteered in the fall 1979.

Grass plots without clover received nitrogen treatments of 0, 75, 150, 225, or 300 lb./acre, in three equal applications on about April 1, June 1, and August 1 in 1978, 1979 and 1980. Three additional treatments were 0, 75, and 180 lb./acre, applied as above, plus simazine applied at 1 lb./acre, each February for weed control.

Yellow foxtail, little barley, cleome flower, and common witchgrass were the major weeds, Evans says.

In 1979, weed production on Coastal bermudagrass decreased as nitrogen rate increased. A similar trend did not occur in 1980.

Applying simazine in February substantially reduced spring weed yields. Clovers were as effective as simazine the first year in controlling weeds and were more effective the second year.

"Weeds were not as prevalent in the bahiagrass because of its more competitive tight sod," Evans says.

"However, the simazine and clover treatment did reduce the amount of weeds. There was a decrease in weed yields from the first to the second year for all treatments."

As on the Coastal, there was no significant difference in weed yields between use of simazine and overseeding with clover. Weeds were eliminated the second year where clover was grown.

"These data demonstrate that cool-season clovers are as effective as herbicides for spring weed control on warm-season perennial grasses. By the second year, no weeds were present on the subterranean clover plots and an insignificant number of weeds occurred in the arrowleaf plots."

"Clovers have the additional advantage over herbicides in that they are competitive to all weeds. Available herbicides for established pastures only control specific broadleaf and/or grassy weeds."

"Pasture production costs are reduced by clover weed control by eliminating the cost of a herbicide and its application. Under limited spring moisture conditions, clover can impede growth of the summer grasses.

"Clovers can be a major part of an integrated pest management system for pastures. In addition to adding symbiotically-fixed nitrogen and extending the grazing season with high-quality forage," Every concluded.

A lot of interest will be the Second Annual Exposition and the American Quarter Horse Foundation Benefit Auction. The Exposition will take place each day of the convention, offering spectators a look at the nation's top equine product manufacturer's wares.

AQHA's American Quarter Horse Foundation Benefit Auction also will be of interest, offering many unique gifts, trips and pieces of western art for the bidder. Early consignments include trips to the All-American Quarter Horse Congress and the 1988 Firecracker Futurity at Delta Downs, and several art pieces by recognized artists. Proceeds for the auction, scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. on March 14, go to such American Quarter Horse Foundation programs as the AQHA Scholarship Program and Quarter Horse Hall of Fame.

The night of Wednesday, March 16, will be filled with awards presentations to many of the top Quarter Horse and their owners during the annual Convention Banquet. High point year and awards will be presented during this annual affair.

Those planning on attending the convention will, for the first time, be able to pre-register, negating waits in registration lines at the Denver Hilton. Advance registration forms are available in The Quarter Horse Journal or may be asked for by contacting AQHA headquarters. Once pre-registered, members may pick up name tags and tickets immediately after arriving at the Denver Hilton. Advance registration must be made prior to March 1, 1983. NCA Supports Plan For Committee on Dietary Guidelines

Denver - The National Cattlemen's Assn. has advised the U.S. Department of Agriculture that it supports USDA's establishment of a Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee.

NCA's comment was made in response to a USDA announcement that it planned to set up a committee of scientists to review comments on the government's Dietary Guidelines. The guidelines were issued in early 1980 by USDA and the Department of Health and Human Services.

USDA said the nine scientists on the advisory group would make any recommendations which the committee deemed appropriate.

In a letter to Dr. Esther Winterfeldt, administrator of USDA's Human Nutrition Information Service, NCA said it felt that establishment of the advisory committee was appropriate and that recommendations based on sound, objective scientific assessment of diet-health information would be in the best interest of the consuming public and the beef cattle industry.

The letter, from Bill Webster, chairman of NCA's Beef Promotion and Consumer Relations Committee, noted that NCA previously told USDA of its concern about dietary guidelines issued by federal government. Of primary concern, it was explained, was a blanket recommendation to avoid or cut back on consumption of saturated fat and/or cholesterol as a way to reduce heart disease incidence.

Even though the guidelines did not specifically recommend a reduction in meat consumption, the recommendation on fat has been interpreted by some persons as meaning people should "eat less meat." This situation has resulted in repeated dissemination of misleading information to the public, NCA said. Actually, NCA has noted, the trend in the scientific literature is away from thinking that reducing heart disease incidence is simply a matter of cutting down on foods that contain saturated fatty acids and cholesterol.

Webster pointed out that NCA previously submitted information on the positive aspects of beef, and it provided scientific citations refuting the diet-fat-cholesterol-disease hypothesis. He said NCA looked forward to having this material reviewed by the committee. He also offered to provide additional information, which has been gathered more recently.

Three persons on the advisory committee will represent USDA, three will represent HHS, and three will be named from a list of nominees recommended by the National Academy of Sciences. USDA will function as the lead agency. The Secretary of Agriculture will name a committee chairman, and USDA's Human Nutrition Information Service will provide input and will be responsible for publishing and distributing reports.

More people would learn from their mistakes if they weren't so busy denying they made them.

Santa Gertrudis Bulls on Feed Test

La Campena Ranch, George West, Texas, is in the process of conducting its 12th annual official gain test for Santa Gertrudis bulls with 140 head being tested from the herds of 19 purchased breeders.

Tom J. Martin, Jr., of La Campena Ranch, said the purpose of the test is to identify those animals that have high gaining ability. This is being done on a high roughage ration with self feeders located in a 110 acre Coastal Hornuda pasture. Feeding under these conditions prevents putting the bulls under the stress of a hot ration and feedlot confinement which could affect their future performance.

The bulls were weighed in at the start of the test November 23 after a two week warm-up period at the ranch. At the end of the first 28 day weighing period the 140 bulls had gained an average of 2.97 pounds per day. The next weighing date will be Tuesday, January 18, and the bulls will be weighed each 28 days until the test is completed.

A Santa Gertrudis crossbreeding program makes a significant contribution to heavy weaning weights, rapid and efficient feedlot gains, and leaner, more desirable cuts of beef. Nine Bar Ranch has spent years developing the type of Santa Gertrudis cattle that cowmen can depend on for productive results. Add a Nine Bar Bull to your herd for great growth potential. For a quality offering that you can depend on make plans to attend the Cowmen's Integrity Sale, a joint production sale with the Nine Bar Ranch, San Jose Cattle Company and the Shelton Ranch, May 2, 1983, in Hempstead, Texas.

New Regulations on Bangs Outlined

Austin — Regulations designed to encourage vaccination for brucellosis control went into effect Jan. 12. They will apply to cattle being shipped into Texas as well as cattle being moved intrastate.

Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director, Texas Animal Health Commission, said that vaccination of eligible female cattle is a cornerstone of the Texas brucellosis program. The new regulations reflect this, in order to more effectively control brucellosis, we simply need to get more cattle vaccinated," he said.

More than 68 percent of all cattle herds in Texas are now free of brucellosis. "This is a good record, but we need to get at the remaining infection in this state. Those regulations relating to vaccination will help us to accomplish this goal," Dr. Holcombe explained.

The two-area program for Texas will become Class B and Class C as of Jan. 12. This means the present Class A control area which comprises 140 counties in the western half of the state will become Class B. The present Class B area, which comprises 114 counties in the eastern half of the state, will become Class C area.

The new vaccination requirements for cattle entering either area of Texas are:

After July 1, 1983 female breeding cattle four months of age or older, with some exceptions, must be vaccinated before entering Texas. The exceptions are: cattle from a certified free herd, cattle being shown to fair or exhibition, cattle from commercial herds, cattle designated to go to a quarantine feedlot or slaughter, and cattle born prior to Jan. 1, 1983 moving from one area to another within the state.

Female cattle four months of age or older born after Jan. 1, 1983 must be vaccinated when moving from one area to another in Texas. However, female cattle born prior to Jan. 1, 1983 moving from one area to another are in the state need not be vaccinated.

Cattle born after Jan. 1, 1983 changing ownership within the C area must have two negative tests at least 60 days apart unless they have been officially vaccinated.

Corn, Wheat, Beans 1982 Crop Record

Washington — The Agriculture Department reported last week record 1982 corn, wheat and soybean harvests, as expected.

In its annual summary of crop production, the department said the 1982 crop rose 2% from the year before to 6.4 billion bushels. The yield per acre was a record 114.8 bushels, up five bushels an acre from 1981.

The wheat crop rose slightly to 2.61 billion bushels. The yield per acre was a record 35.8 bushels, up 1.1 bushels an acre from 1981.

The 1982 soybean crop jumped 14% from the year before to 2.28 billion bushels. The yield per acre rose to 32.2 bushels, a 2.1-bushel-a-acre increase.

The number of acres of wheat and corn harvested declined slightly, largely because of voluntary acreage reduction programs sponsored by the government. But the decline in plantings were more than offset by the increased yields, the department said.

Higher 1982 production also was reported for oats, barley, hay and sunflower. Lower production was recorded for sorghum, rice, peanuts and tobacco.

Corn, Wheat, Beans 1982 Crop Record

Washington — The Agriculture Department reported last week record 1982 corn, wheat and soybean harvests, as expected.

In its annual summary of crop production, the department said the 1982 crop rose 2% from the year before to 6.4 billion bushels. The yield per acre was a record 114.8 bushels, up five bushels an acre from 1981.

The wheat crop rose slightly to 2.61 billion bushels. The yield per acre was a record 35.8 bushels, up 1.1 bushels an acre from 1981.

The 1982 soybean crop jumped 14% from the year before to 2.28 billion bushels. The yield per acre rose to 32.2 bushels, a 2.1-bushel-a-acre increase.

The number of acres of wheat and corn harvested declined slightly, largely because of voluntary acreage reduction programs sponsored by the government. But the decline in plantings were more than offset by the increased yields, the department said.

Higher 1982 production also was reported for oats, barley, hay and sunflower. Lower production was recorded for sorghum, rice, peanuts and tobacco.

TOMPKINS
Amarillo Livestock Auction Adds Video Division

Amarillo - In a progressive move for the Amarillo Livestock Auction Company, a video auction division has been added. Jack Tompkins, a long-time Amarillo resident and well-known agriculture broadcaster has been named manager of the new division.
 Tompkins assumed his duties as manager of the Amarillo Livestock Video Auction on January 1st.
 After purchasing the facility in October, 1982, new owners, John Tamplin, and Buddy Jaffery announced they would look into the possibility of providing saw marketing alternatives to area cattlemen. At that time, they cited video marketing as a new avenue they would explore.
 "In addition to our weekly market, we will conduct the video sales as a means of selling cattle to be delivered at a future date. We hope this new video auction division will prove to be a valuable service to the cattlemen in the five states of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado, and Kansas," said Tompkins.
 Tompkins holds a Bachelor Degree in Animal Husbandry from Texas A&M. He served as an assistant county agent in Montgomery county and was involved in the livestock commission business prior to entering the farm broadcasting field. In June, 1981, Tompkins-Heard Associates, Inc., was purchased by Rosewood-Batson Advertising Agency. Tompkins was employed there prior to assuming his duties with the Amarillo Livestock Video Auction and plans to use their production facilities in his future work.
 For the past several years, Tompkins has served as the voice of the auction company by broadcasting daily market reports from the facility. He will continue to serve in this capacity at the auction in addition to his duties as manager of the video division.
 The first video auction is scheduled for April 4th, at one o'clock, p.m., at the Amarillo Livestock Auction Company. A preview showing of all cattle will start at eight o'clock, a.m.
